Summary

If you do not meet milestones, your implementation could be delayed by a minimum of one month to capture month end cycle.

In our experience, clients who are not prepared at go-live can quickly fall far behind where they need to be with the software. This usually results in the customer requesting re-implementation, and often times it is required to get them back on track.

Re-implementation is problematic and expensive; thus, we strongly recommend that customers carefully evaluate where they are at with the training and with the milestones they need to meet.